Intergenerational Conversation on Heritage, Communities and Sustainable Development

Webinar 2: Earthen Architecture for and by Communities

Earthen architecture is one of the most original and powerful expressions of our ability to create a built environment with readily available resources. Over the years, communities created and maintained a connection with earthen structures for different reasons as they reflect the times' experiences and mirror the communities' identity. A lot of knowledge about this heritage is lost, resulting in various unanswered questions essential to understanding the present and future. This webinar examines how communities in Jordan and Algeria maintain the connection to significant places, including earthen structures.
