Intergenerational Conversation on Heritage, Communities and Sustainable Development

Webinar 3: Understanding Practices and Rethinking Earthen Heritage for Community Development

The values and significance of earthen structure is now better understood as being both determined by and the responsibility of local communities, their participation from the outset is clearly essential to reach a common understanding. However, the skills and practices connected to earthen structure is viewed as old and not beneficial to current needs and yearnings of communities for development. This webinar will provide insights into the roles of earthen structures in meeting current needs across communities. The conversation will also provide practical steps for integration of earthen structure into actions and interventions for sustainable development at community level.
